

State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Dr. Jennifer McCormick

Dr. Jennifer McCormick is Indiana's forty-fourth State Superintendent of Public Instruction. A nationally-recognized educator and innovator, Dr. McCormick has served at every level of the K-12 education system. She has been a secondary special education and language arts teacher, elementary principal, assistant superintendent, and served as a district superintendent for seven and a half years. As Indiana's education system leader, Dr. McCormick is an energetic and tireless advocate for children, dedicated to improving educational outcomes.

Dr. McCormick makes her home in Indianapolis with her husband, Trent, public school administrator. They have one son, Cael, who attends West Point Military Academy.
